

NOTICE TO ALL TEAM MEMBERS

Dear Team,

As we step into the festive season, prepare to move into our new office, and embrace the next phase of expansion, it is the right moment to pause, reflect, and share an important message with all of you. This transition is not just a change of location or infrastructure — it represents growth, renewal, and the promise of greater opportunities for every member of our organisation.

We have reached this point because of the collective contributions of each of you. Every client served, every project delivered, and every challenge overcome has been possible only because of the dedication, energy, and sincerity that this team has put forth over the years. For that, I remain genuinely grateful. At the same time, with expansion and progress come higher expectations, greater responsibilities, and the need for stricter discipline in the way we work.

Growth & Recognition

Let me first reaffirm what lies at the heart of our philosophy: this organisation is committed to supporting each employee in their professional journey. Every team member deserves the chance to grow, to be recognised for their contributions, and to be treated with respect and dignity. We remain committed to offering:

- Opportunities to upgrade and diversify skills.
- Platforms for recognition where effort goes unnoticed.
- A work environment that values respect, fairness, and collaboration.

That said, growth and recognition do not arrive passively. They must be sought, earned, and actively pursued. If you wish to learn more, improve your craft, or expand your role, the initiative must come from you. We will always encourage those who demonstrate a willingness to improve and support them with resources, mentoring, and opportunities. But the first step must be yours.

Rising Challenges & Expectations

It is essential to understand that the world around us is constantly changing and evolving. Customer expectations are growing faster than ever before, competitors are becoming sharper, and service standards are only rising. What was acceptable yesterday is no longer good enough today, and what satisfies today may not suffice tomorrow.

In such an environment, survival and success depend on a straightforward principle:

Consistent, responsible, and ownership-driven delivery.

Every email, every client call, every report, every follow-up — no matter how small it may appear — must be treated with seriousness and completed with diligence. A minor lapse at one end can easily snowball into significant dissatisfaction for the customer and, in turn, damage our reputation as a service-oriented organisation.

It is in this context that certain expectations and policies need to be reiterated more strongly and enforced more strictly.

Organisational Integrity & Priorities

Our strength lies in the trust our clients place in us and the integrity with which we have built long-term relationships. This integrity cannot be compromised under any circumstances. While we encourage a friendly and collaborative atmosphere within the office, it must always be remembered that your first and foremost responsibility is towards the organisation and its projects, not towards personal relationships or individual preferences.

Personal ties, however close they may be, must never take precedence over professional judgment. Unfortunately, there have been recent incidents where documents were shown or clearances given without proper authority, sometimes influenced by personal considerations. Such actions strike at the very core of organisational integrity and are not acceptable. As we advance, let this be understood clearly: any compromise in integrity, however small it may seem, will be treated with utmost seriousness and dealt with firmly.

Accountability for Closure & No Excuses

A recurring issue that has come to light is the failure to take complete ownership of tasks and responsibilities. From this moment forward, let it be clear that any matter assigned to you is your sole responsibility to drive to closure.

This means:

- Do not wait endlessly for others to respond. It is your duty to follow up.
- If your work depends on inputs from someone else, chase it until it is resolved.
- If a dependency causes a delay, escalate it to your manager, the relevant team, or me directly — but do not leave it open-ended.

Equally important, please note that excuses will not be entertained. Common responses like "I sent the mail but got no reply," "I was waiting for confirmation," or "I thought this was how it was done before" are not valid. Similarly, arguments such as "this was happening before I joined" or "I was not aware" are no longer acceptable. Each one of you is mature, experienced, and fully capable of managing responsibilities.

If you are unsure or unclear, ask before proceeding. You may ask 10 times if needed, and we will gladly answer 11 times — but once an error occurs, no excuse is acceptable. Ownership, clarity, and closure are now non-negotiable expectations.

Zero Tolerance Policy

In line with these expectations, we will adopt a zero-tolerance policy towards any negligence, carelessness, or casual approach that impacts delivery, damages customer relationships, or weakens internal collaboration. This policy applies across the board and covers:

- Failure to read, respond to, or act upon official communications, via all modes – phone, emails, and messages
- Lack of accountability in handling assigned tasks.
- Missed deadlines or casual treatment of commitments.
- Misuse of the trust and flexibility that management has extended over time.

The flexibility and freedom given to this team have always been a point of pride, but liberty cannot come at the cost of responsibility. Henceforth, lapses in these areas will no longer be overlooked.

Leave & Attendance Policy

Another area that requires tightening is leave and attendance. Effective immediately:

- Leave and holiday policies will be enforced without exception. All requests must be submitted in advance and within the prescribed timelines.

The recent misuse of the work-from-home allowance during office repairs was deeply concerning. Despite clear instructions, several employees misused this flexibility, resulting in service gaps and strained customer interactions. Such misuse not only weakens delivery but also damages the trust that management has extended in good faith. In the future, this kind of behavior will not be tolerated.

Use of Mobile Phones & Office Resources

It has also come to our attention that personal mobile phones and office resources — especially internet facilities — are being misused for personal and social media activities during working hours. This trend has become a significant issue, resulting in wasted time and reduced productivity.

We respect your independence and do not wish to follow the rigid practices of other offices where phones are locked away. However, this freedom comes with responsibility, and misuse cannot be allowed to continue. Henceforth:

- Personal phone calls should be kept brief (1–2 minutes maximum) and limited to urgent matters.
- Longer personal conversations should be conducted only during designated break times, which are entirely at your discretion.
- Office internet, systems, and infrastructure must be used strictly for official work. Any deviation from this will be considered a breach of discipline.

Team Spirit & Professionalism

Finally, let us remember that we are in the business of consumer services, where customer expectations often require us to go beyond rigid timings or formal job descriptions. While we do not encourage unnecessary late sittings or rigid clock-ins, responsiveness during office hours is essential. Moreover, when circumstances demand, flexibility to extend efforts is expected from everyone.

Equally, team spirit must remain at the center of our work culture. Each of you has a role to play, but the success of one depends on the support of another. Commitments made to clients and colleagues must always be honored. Professionalism demands not only individual performance but also collective responsibility.

This notice is not intended to single out individuals, but to serve as a collective reminder of the standards we must uphold to sustain and grow in an increasingly competitive environment. Our survival and growth will rest on three pillars: discipline, responsibility, and ownership.

At the same time, we remain equally committed to ensuring that everyone here continues to receive respect, recognition, and opportunities for growth.

But growth and recognition will only come to those who actively seek it, demonstrate initiative, and deliver with sincerity.

As we move into this new phase of expansion, let us remind ourselves that our customers' satisfaction and trust must remain at the heart of everything we do. Together, we must recommit ourselves to delivering excellence, safeguarding organisational integrity, and strengthening our reputation as a team that can be relied upon without compromise.

Together, let us commit to responsibility, growth, and excellence — so that both the organisation and each one of us can rise to greater heights.

In the coming days, we will also conduct individual and departmental discussions to ensure that everyone is aligned and that, together, we can achieve these objectives in both spirit and action.

Warm regards,

Brahm Alreja
Director
